

ROCK THE BALLOT. BUILD THE FUTURE.

MAKE YOUR IMPACT THIS ELECTION.

Did You Know?

There are races every election year that are decided by very small margins. If more voters participated in these elections, the outcome could have been entirely different

Close 2024 Elections

In California's 13th district, Democrat Adam Gray defeated incumbent John Duarte (R) by a margin of only 187 votes.

Mariannette Miller-Meeks (R) held her seat against Christina Bohannon (D) by a narrow 0.19% point margin.

Allison Riggs (D, North Carolina Supreme Court) won her seat by just 734 votes following a recount and months of litigation.

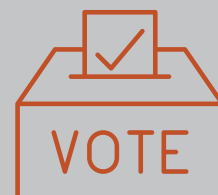

Across the U.S., 64 state legislative races were decided by fewer than 100 votes. New Hampshire has the most such instances, with 22 races decided by this ultra-narrow margin.

David McCormick (R, PA) defeated incumbent Bob Casey Jr. by 15,000 votes, a margin of 0.22%, which triggered an automatic recount.

Why It's Important

Many elections are decided by fewer people than could fit in a local coffee shop. Your single vote can literally be the tie-breaker that determines who represents your county, state or country and creates your laws.
